CALL FOR PAPERS

Ethnologists, Cultural and Social Anthropologists, historians, geographers, archaeologists, and literary scientists conducting island ethnographies from a historical and cultural studies perspective are invited to submit an abstract of 250 words and a short bio of 150 words for a presentation of max 15 minutes. The Call for Papers is specifically aimed at junior researchers and doctoral students but is also open for advanced researchers. The aim of the workshop is, in addition to historical-empirical, theoretical and methodological reflection, to intensify networking between academics working in the field of island studies.

After the submission, the participants will be assigned as peer commentators for one paper and the submitted papers will be circulated among the participants. Participants will present their research in various sessions, receiving direct feedback via peer comments. The topics will be discussed in interactive roundtables. In addition, there will be a keynote by Regina Römhild (Berlin) and a visit to an exhibition about islands in the Weltmuseum Wien.
